The Intuitive Customer
7 Imperatives for Moving Your Customer Experience to the Next Level

Colin Shaw, Founder & CEO of Beyond Philosophy, USA, Ryan Hamilton, Emory University’s Goizueta Business School, USA

Consumers are unreasonable – but they’re not stupid. We all like to think we make rational choices. But thirty years’ of research has shown that what we actually do is make instinctive, ‘gut’ choices and then reverse engineer a set of rational criteria to justify that choice in order to fool ourselves into believing that we are not being unreasonable. The funny thing is that those gut choices consumers make are often better than the ones they make when they actively and rationally consider their options. In other words – consumers are sensibly unreasonable.

This book is about Behavioral Economics and consumer psychology. Building on the work of Daniel Kahneman (Thinking Fast and Slow), Dan Ariely (Predictably Irrational) and others, Shaw and Hamilton unpack this new understanding of how people behave, explain what it means for organizations who really want to understand their customers, and show you what to do to create exceptional customer experiences.

Contents:
1. Too Often Organizations are Solving the Wrong Problem
2. Guiding Principle 1: Customers are Irrational - Don’t Fight It, Embrace It
3. Guiding Principle 2: Customer’s Minds can be in Conflict with Themselves
4. Guiding Principle 3: Easy is More Important than You Think It is
5. Guiding Principle 4: Customers are What They do
6. Guiding Principle 5: Customer Loyalty is Only a Memory
7. Guiding Principle 6: Customers do Things and They don’t Know Why

Return of the Hustle
The Art of Marketing with Music

Eric Sheinkop, Co-Founder of Music Dealers, USA

Has a commercial ever brought you to tears? Has a movie ever inspired you so much you change your way of life? Has the series finale of a television show ever broken your heart? Has a video game ever altered your perception of reality?

A strong music strategy is fundamental to the success of television, film, brands and video games. Because of higher expectations for audiovisual content, it will take more than clever animation or a celebrity cameo to connect with consumers in an authentic, organic way to build a bond that extends far beyond product experience. Music touches us emotionally in a way that words seldom do. We feel it, we remember it.

In Return of the Hustle, a leading music and marketing industry insider discusses the diverse audio touchpoints for four key industries and shows how marketers, storytellers, and advertisers can use music to effectively guide audiences along the customer journey from passive consumers to brand advocates. It provides readers with a blueprint for music strategy that professionals at any level in any industry can use to attract consumers, immerse them into the content, and extend relationships between them and the brand long after the commercial ends or the credits roll. With detailed case studies, exhaustive interviews, and thorough research, Return of the Hustle gives readers the playbook to use the marketing power of music to drive business results.

Conscious Collaboration
Re-Thinking the Way We Work Together, for Good

Ben Emmens, Co-Founder of The Conscious Project, UK

When collaboration works, the results can be breath-taking! But it doesn't always deliver on its potential. Collaboration has been defined as 'an unnatural act practiced by non-consenting adults'. Some collaboration can be painfully difficult with the result that problems are either ignored or smoothed over until the collaboration falters or disintegrates, or self-interest and personal agendas take over and conflict quickly arises.

Collaboration and partnerships work well in the aid sector because they have to — no one body has the resources to solve massive problems on their own. Business often sees the advantages of collaboratively sharing costs without fully recognizing the shift in mindset that is required to take managers with a 'winner takes all' worldview and get them performing effectively in a win-win world.

Part of the solution lies in bringing consciousness to the workplace and developing it as a core competence. A conscious approach to business relationships, planning, and delivery can enable individuals and organizations to truly think about what they are doing, make changes where needed, and become more effective. It is a particularly effective way of managing the multiple and occasionally conflicting stakeholder objectives inherent in any collaborative project.

The author draws on his experience in the aid sector and with non-profit organizations to describe the building blocks that underpin successful collaboration, and inspires us to re-think the way we work together, for good.

Brewing, Beer and Pubs
A Global Perspective

Ignazio Cabras, Northumbria University, UK, David Higgins, Newcastle University Business School, UK, David Preece, Teesside University, UK

Brewing, Beer and Pubs addresses a range of contemporary issues and challenges in the key sector of the global economy, and includes contributions by research specialists from a variety of countries and disciplines. This book includes the marketing and globalization of the brewing industry, beer excise duties and market concentration, and reflections upon developments in brewing and beer consumption across the world in order to explore the wide-reaching influence of this industry. Alongside these global topics more localised themes are presented such as market integration in the Chinese beer and wine markets, beer and brewing in Africa and South America, and turbulence and change in the UK public house industry, which demonstrate how the consumption of beer in pubs and other social environments make the beer industry integral to local communities and regions worldwide.

Leadership: All You Need To Know
2nd edition

David Pendleton, Edgecumbe Consulting Group, UK; Adrian F. Furnham, UCL, UK

"Amidst the clutter of books on leadership, this book stands out. It helps make sense of a whole range of leadership theories and integrates it all into the authors' own compelling view of what makes leaders effective. I've found their framework very helpful in my own work." - Larry Benjamin, Capwell Partners, Chicago, USA

"An important step for a company to secure future success is to have effective leader teams. Working with the ideas in this book has been very useful to us and very inspiring." - Asa Gabriel, SVP HR, ICA Group, Sweden

"Keep this book at your elbow. The ideas it brings to life are profoundly useful. And it's an enjoyable read along the way." - Sir Rod Eddington, Chairman, JP Morgan Australia and New Zealand

Leadership experts David Pendleton and Adrian Furnham present an innovative model for leadership success in a turbulent world. This thoroughly updated second edition shows how to make the kind of difference that all organizations, both public and private sector, want and need. Early chapters show the powerful effect leadership can have on organizations; subsequent chapters present new ideas that are elegantly simple, conceptually coherent and radically different, based on the best research in the field. The ideas in this book have also been tested in major multinational organizations over recent years. The aim is to provide leaders and those who work with them with a practical guide to how to increase the effectiveness of leadership in any organization.

Cosmopolitan Managers
Executive Development that Works

Santiago Iñíguez de Onzoño, Instituto de Empresa, Spain

Executive education is a billion dollar industry that has the potential to transform individual and organizational performance, but in too many cases the decision whether or not to lavish it upon any given manager comes down to whether the fear that they will leave if you don’t spend money on them is greater than the fear that they will leave if you do.

Given that the future of your business, or your career, depends on developing your managerial talent to its fullest potential. This book looks at how the future of executive education is changing to meet the needs and wants of top managerial talent. It argues that part of the solution is to balance the technical, analysis-based ‘engineering’ training that forms the basis of many senior managers’ initial study, with a more rounded, integrated approach that includes learning derived from the humanities, such as art and history. Illustrated with fascinating examples drawn from interviews with some of the most influential figures in business education and corporate training around the world. It delivers a unique perspective and valuable insights on what it takes to deliver world-class corporate training.

Black Swan Start Ups
Understanding the Rise of Successful Technology Business in Unlikely Places

Sami Mahroum, INSEAD Abu Dhabi Campus, UAE

This book explores start ups that have thrived against the odds in places where start up success was deemed to be unlikely. Discussing a number of technology start ups from around the world that have succeeded without state backing nor local venture and seed capital, Black Swan Start Ups provides unique insights into unsung models of success beyond the two dominant narratives of Asia’s 'Tiger Economies' and America’s Silicon Valley miracle. The author describes these stories of success as ‘black swan events’ and ascribes their achievements to the ability of entrepreneurs to leverage the ‘place surplus’ of their locations, while building connections to support networks outside their immediate geographies. Including case studies such as Skype in Estonia, SoundCloud in Germany and Bayt.com in Dubai, this insightful book gives a holistic and wide-ranging view of how technology start ups have, and can, succeed in less likely places.

Democratic Orators from JFK to Barack Obama

Edited by Andrew S. Crines, University of Liverpool, UK, David S. Moon, University of Bath, UK, Robert Lehrman, American University, USA

"Once a celebrated art, oratory is now more likely to be discussed as a lost or declining one. Yet as this volume demonstrates, oratorical skill remains a powerful tool for any politician. This illuminating collection examining orators in the Democratic Party will be a must read for students and scholars of politics and communication." - Richard Hayton, University of Leeds, UK

"A powerful and impressive contribution to our understanding of the interlocking themes of oratory, rhetoric and leadership in the United States. Its authors combine detailed knowledge of the changing context of political speech making with a sensitive appreciation of the conceptual framework used in the study of communication." - Gillian Peele, University of Oxford, UK

Who Runs the Economy?
The Role of Power in Economics

Edited by Robert Skidelsky, University of Warwick, UK, Nan Craig, Centre for Global Studies, UK

Since the financial crisis of 2008 and the following Great Recession, there has been surprisingly little change in the systems of ideas, institutions and policies which preceded the crash and helped bring it about. 'Mainstream' economics carries on much as it did before. Despite much discussion of what went wrong, very little has substantially changed. Perhaps the answer has something to do with power; a subject on which economics is unusually quiet. Whilst economics may be able to discuss bargaining power and market power, it fails to explore the reciprocal connections between economic ideas and politics: the political power of economic ideas on the one side, and the influence of power structures on economic thought on the other. This book explores how the supposedly neutral discipline of economics does not simply describe human behaviour, but in fact shapes it.

From Keynes to Piketty
The Century that Shook Up Economics

Peter de Haan, Independent Consultant, The Netherlands

From Keynes to Piketty provides the reader with an accessible and entertaining insight into the development of economic thought over the past century. Starting with John Maynard Keynes's bestseller, The Economic Consequences of Peace (1919), and ending with Thomas Piketty's blockbuster, Capital in the Twenty First Century (2014), the author explains which dramatic political and economic events changed the way economists interpreted these events, and how they revolutionized the economic science. The book contains biographies of Keynes, Schumpeter, Galbraith, Hayek, Friedman, Hirschman, North, and Piketty, alongside others, and highlights their extraordinary lives and works, anecdotes about them, and their often sharp differences of opinion. Extensive summaries of their main works provide the interested scholar and student with an accurate presentation of their contents. A must-read for all those who wonder what happened to economics during the past century, and why.

The Shadow Banking System
Creating Transparency in the Financial Markets

Valerio Lemma, Marconi University of Rome, Italy

Shadow banking has grown in importance, to even rival traditional banking. However, its role in fuelling real estate bubbles which burst in the later 2000s is commonly attributed as one of the major causes of the global financial crisis.

In this study, Valerio Lemma provides a complete overview of the shadow banking system from a legal and economic perspective. He defines the current regulatory framework of shadow banking and explores its impact on financial firms. By analysing the rules governing this market based financial system, the author highlights the functions of the system, and investigates its entities, operations and risks. Focusing on the regulatory aspects of shadow banking, this book provides an original view, demonstrating that unregulated banking and finance and the current lack of supervision in shadow banking is a market failure. This core research identifies a need for transparency in the shadow areas of capital markets, and finally suggests a resolution for the strengthened control of shadow banking entities and operations.

The book shows the fundamentals of the shadow banking system and its entities, operations and risks. Focusing on the regulatory aspects, it provides an original view that is able to demonstrate that the lack of supervision is a market failure.

Understanding Consumer Financial Behavior
Money Management in an Age of Financial Illiteracy

W. Fred van Raaij, Tilburg University, The Netherlands

Government policies, marketing campaigns of banks, insurance companies and other financial institutions, and consumers’ protective actions all depend on assumptions about consumer financial behavior. Unfortunately, many consumers have no or little knowledge of budgeting, financial products, and financial planning.

It is therefore important that organizations and market authorities know why consumers spend, borrow, insure, invest, and save for their retirement - or why they do not.

Understanding Consumer Financial Behavior provides a systemic economic and behavioral approach to the way people handle their finances. It discusses the different types of financial behaviors consumers may engage in and explores the psychological explanations for their behavior and choices. This exciting new book is essential reading for scholars of marketing, finance, and management; financial professionals; and consumer policy makers.

HISTORY

A History of Disease in Ancient Times

More Lethal than War

Philip Norrie, University of New South Wales, Australia

This book shows how bubonic plague and smallpox helped end the Hittite Empire, the Bronze Age in the Near East and later the Carthaginian Empire. The book examines all the possible infectious diseases present in ancient times and show that life was a daily struggle for survival either avoiding or fighting against these infectious disease epidemics. The book argues that infectious disease epidemics are a critical link in the chain of causation for the demise of most civilizations in the ancient world and that ancient historians should no longer ignore them, as is currently the case.

The History of UNESCO

Global Actions and Impacts

Edited by Poul Duedahl, Aalborg University, Denmark

The mission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), as defined just after the end of World War II, is to construct intellectual and moral solidarity in order to build ‘the defenses of peace’ in the minds of men and women. The Organization has therefore carried out a considerable amount of mental engineering. Historians have so far uncovered the roots of many of the soft power initiatives launched to construct sincere solidarity between people, but we still know very little about their impact. In this publication, leading historians within the field trace the routes of selected initiatives from the center to the periphery from UNESCO’s headquarters in Paris to the member states to assess UNESCO’s global impact from World War II and up till today.

Approaching Infinity

Michael Huemer, University of Colorado Boulder, USA

Approaching Infinity addresses seventeen paradoxes of the infinite, most of which have no generally accepted solutions. The book addresses these paradoxes using a new theory of infinity, which entails that an infinite series is uncompletable when it requires something to possess an infinite intensive magnitude. Along the way, the author addresses the nature of numbers, sets, geometric points, and related matters. It expresses the need for a theory of infinity, and reviews both old and new theories of infinity. It discusses the purposes of studying infinity and the troubles with traditional approaches to the problem, and concludes by offering a solution to some existing paradoxes.

Applied Cyberpsychology
Practical Applications of Cyberpsychological Theory and Research

Edited by Alison Attrill and Chris Fullwood both at University of Wolverhampton, UK

This book brings together overviews from a number of leading authorities in the field, to suggest how academic theory and research can be applied to a variety of online behaviours. Both positive and negative behaviours are considered, including topics as diverse as parenting the online child, age-related internet usage and cultural considerations in online interactions. Psychological research can no longer view online and offline worlds as different entities, but must consider online behaviours as equally distinct as offline activities. It focuses on personal applications of the Internet, insight is also offered into the role that theory and research plays in training military personnel as well as the use of psychometric testing to select and retain employees.

The Metamorphoses of the Brain – Neurologisation and its Discontents

Jan De Vos, Ghent University, Belgium

Jan De Vos examines the different metamorphoses of the brain: the educated brain, the material brain, the iconographic brain, the sexual brain, the celebrated brain and, finally, the political brain. This first, protracted and sustained argument on neurologisation, which lays bare its lineage with psychologisation, should be taken seriously by psychologists, educationalists, sociologists, students of cultural studies, policy makers and, above all, neuroscientists themselves.

Transnational Popular Psychology
and the Global Self-Help Industry

The Politics of Contemporary Social Change

Daniel Nehring, University of Worcester, UK; Emmanuel Alvarado, Palm Beach State College, US; Eric C. Hendriks, Peking University, China; Dylan Kerrigan, University of the West Indies, Trinidad & Tobago

"[This] is the book we have all been waiting for: Nehring and his co-authors chart the globalization of self-help culture from the US and the UK, to China, Mexico, Trinidad and Tobago, capturing the hybridization of the form and the spread of therapeutic cultures and neoliberal ideology across the globe. While most studies of self-help culture to date have focused on the genre's prevalence in the Anglophone world, chiefly the US and the UK, Transnational Popular Psychology and the Global Self-Help Industry reveals just how prevalent the propaganda of entrepreneurial self-improvement has become." - Micki McGee, author of Self-Help, Inc: Makeover Culture in American Life, Associate Professor of Sociology and American Studies, Fordham University, USA

Self-help books aim to empower their readers, deliver happiness and personal fulfillment but do they really live up to this? This book offers a fresh perspective on self-help culture and popular psychology. It explores the production, circulation and consumption of self-help books from an innovative transnational perspective. Case studies on Trinidad and Tobago, Mexico, the People's Republic of China, the United Kingdom and the USA explore the roles which self-help's therapeutic narratives of self and social relationships play in the contemporary world. In this context, the book questions the extent to which self-help fulfils its promise of individual autonomy and contentment. At the same time, it addresses debates about contemporary processes of globalisation as sources of cultural standardization.

Virtual Workers and the Global Labour Market

Edited by Juliet Webster, London School of Economics, UK, Keith Randle, University of Hertfordshire, UK

The emerging world of virtual work is not tied to physical workplaces or particular locations, but is dispersed and footloose. It is frequently precarious, and blurs the boundaries between work and non-work, production and consumption. Contributors to this wide-ranging volume of case studies identify the growing and diverse army of virtual workers. Building from an overarching introduction which discusses the salient features of virtual work, this collection considers the challenges in analysing the class position of virtual workers.

Virtual Workers and the Global Labour Market features international examples of emerging occupations and working conditions in new media, gaming, journalism, advertising and branding, software development and offshore services. Cross-disciplinary insights from across the social sciences inform contributions on labour market entry, employment relations, precariousness, the dynamics of virtual teams, and cyberbullying, in order to illustrate the diversity of virtual work, its circumstances and its labour force.

The Sociology of Fun

Ben Fincham, University of Sussex, UK

What is fun? How is it distinct from happiness or pleasure? How do we know when we are having it? This book is the first to provide a comprehensive sociological account of this taken-for-granted social phenomenon. Fincham investigates areas such as our memories of fun in childhood, the fun we have as adults, our muted experiences of fun at work and our lived experiences of having fun. It uses first-hand accounts and a new approach to interpreting fun, it exposes the paradox of fun as not serious or unimportant whilst at the same time essential for a happy life. It addresses questions of control, transgression and the primacy of social relationships in fun. The Sociology of Fun is intended to provoke discussion about how we want to have fun and who determines the fun we have.

Reporting Dangerously: Journalist Killings, Intimidation and Security

Simon Cottle, Richard Sambrook and Nick Mosdell all at Cardiff University, UK

Reporting Dangerously: Journalist Killings, Intimidation and Security examines the statistics and looks at the trends in journalist killings and intimidation around the world. It identifies what factors have led to this rise and positions these in historical and global contexts. This important study also provides case studies and first-hand accounts from journalists working in some of the most dangerous places in the world today and seeks to understand the different pressures they must confront. It also examines industry and political responses to these trends and pressures as well as the latest international initiatives aimed at challenging cultures of impunity and keeping journalists safe. Throughout, the authors argue that journalism contributes a vital if often neglected role in the formation and conduct of civil societies. This is why reporting from ‘uncivil’ places matters and this is why journalists are often positioned in harm’s way.

Neurotechnologies of the Self
Mind, Brain and Subjectivity

Jonna Breninkimejier, Radboud University Nijmegen, The Netherlands

Taking care of oneself is increasingly interpreted as taking care of one’s brain. Apart from pills, books, food, and games for a better brain, people can also use neurotechnologies for self-improvement.

This book explores how the use of brain devices to understand or improve the self changes people’s subjectivity; how brains and selves interact in the work of early brainwave scientists and contemporary practitioners; how users of neurofeedback (brainwave training) constitute a new mode of self that is extended with a brain and various other (physiological, psychological, material, and sometimes spiritual) entities, and; how clients, practitioners and other actors perform a dance of agency during the neurofeedback process.

Through these topics, Jonna Breninkimejier provides a historical, ethnographical, and theoretical exploration of the mode of being that is constituted when people use a brain device to improve themselves.

Fat Bodies, Health and the Media

Jayne Raisborough, University of Brighton, UK

Our televisions bulge with weight-loss shows, as the news warn of the obesity epidemic. Fat is such a villain that larger people are stigmatized and we all are seduced by life-changing claims of a multi-billion pound diet industry. Yet, when we question if our bathroom scales can really tell us about our health, we start to ask just why and how fat holds such fascination.

In this book, Jayne Raisborough explores interpretations of fat bodies from Palaeolithic Europe to Poverty Porn TV to argue that fat’s materiality makes it ripe for stigmatising associations. However, especially in a social context that presents health as a matter of choice, fat also emerges as an ideal redemptive substance to be pummelled and starved into submission. This book presents a ‘fat sensibility’ to demonstrate how fat is helping us all become responsibilised healthy-citizens.

Robert Z. Aliber and Charles P. Kindleberger

Foreward by Robert M. Solow, Nobel Laureate

This seventh edition of an investment classic has been thoroughly revised and expanded following the latest crises to hit international markets. Renowned economist Robert Z. Aliber introduces the concept that global financial crises in recent years are not independent events, but symptomatic of an inherent instability in the international system.
